Relationship building.

“For me, I think patience and explaining things has been key in helping families and children be successful,” said Jill. “Sometimes it’s the little things that cause a shift for someone. I think it’s important to show respect and grace to folks.”

A familiar face. While at Anderson, an ERN member company, during her first week on the job, Jill had several people approach her. “They were happy to see me as we had worked together before. One young man said I was the ‘best case-worker he ever had’....and that is a pretty amazing feeling!”

Take a positive step forward.

Jill is ready, are you? Say hello to her in passing or stop by Jill’s private office space. She is quick to respond by phone and email.
